A Review of Beltsville History (Part 4 of a 4 part series)

By Ted Ladd

Beltsville and the Civil War

Abraham Lincoln was elected president of the United States on November 6, 1860. In all of Prince George's County, Lincoln received just one vote. Even before he moved into the White House, his election prompted seven southern states to form the Confederate States of America. Lincoln was inaugurated on March 4, 1861. The Civil War was about to begin.

On April 12, 1861, Confederate

armed forces shelled Fort Sumter in Charleston Harbor, South Carolina, and the fort was forced to surrender the next day. President Lincoln assumed Confederates would soon attack Washington, D.C., and he requested 75,000 troops from northern state militias to come to protect the capital.

Among others, the 6th Massachusetts Regiment answered the call and headed for Washington by train from Lowell, Massachusetts. When arriving in Baltimore on April 19, 1861, they were met by an angry mob, and as the troops marched from one train station to another, they were pelted with bricks and debris. A shot rang out, and the first casualty of the Civil War fell on Pratt Street in Baltimore. He was 17-year-old private Luther Crawford Ladd. As his fellow soldiers gathered around him, he uttered his last words, "All hail the stars and stripes." The Civil War had come to Maryland.

In those days, Prince George's County was largely agricultural, and the main crop of tobacco was grown on large plantations. The population was 50 percent slaves.

Pack 1031's 2016 Arrow of Light Scouts Bridge to Boy Scouts

It was a busy April for Cub Pack 1031. On Monday, April 25, four Arrow of Light Scouts from Cub Pack 1031 were presented their Arrow of Light Award at a crossover ceremony at the Beltsville Community Center campfire pit.

The day before the ceremony, the Arrow scouts and a crew of Boys Scouts came out with their parents and leaders to clean the fire pit. The pack had also come out on April 16 and cleaned the Little Paint Branch Trail as part of our adoption of the trail.

The Arrow of Light is the highest rank a scout can achieve in Cub Scouting and is one of two Cub Scout awards that can be worn on the Boy Scout uniform. A Webelos fire and the Arrow of Light ceremony was used to demonstrate to family and fellow scouts the progression of the Cub Scouts and meaning of the Arrow of Light.

To earn the rank, the Webelos scouts, Benjamin C., Justin F., and Aiden and Alex M., worked on achievements over a two-year period to learn the skills they will need to succeed in Boy Scouts, including basics of orienteering and pioneering.

It was a fun time with skits and songs. Then, the scouts then gathered together to share refreshments and congratulate the scouts.

Cub Pack 1031 came out on April 16 to clean the Little Paint Branch Trail, especially the area along the creek across from Old Rec, which was littered with beer bottles and trash. The pack collected 13 large bags of bottles in this cleanup.

If your son is interested in joining Cub Scouts, please contact

Regina Halper at BeAScout.org (search for Cub Pack 1031 in Beltsville).

Scouts Erect Famous Monkey Bridge

By Gary Baughan,
Assistant Scoutmaster

At the annual Beltsville Day the scouts erected their famous Monkey Bridge using their pioneering and engineering skills. The Scouts lashed and tied logs together entirely with rope to make the A frames on each end of the bridge. Then they strung a long, thick rope to each A frame to make the tight-rope with safety ropes on either side. The scouts each tested the bridge to be sure it was safe before several brave souls from the Beltsville community walked across the bridge. Scouts that had their hands in the building of the monkey bridge included Abel, Vlad, Brandon, Casey, Walker, Michael, Surya, Kyle, Trevor, Mike, Solomon, Daniel, Sam, and Henry. Adult leaders: Scoutmaster,

Destination Imagination

By Cheri Bateman

For those who aren't familiar with Destination Imagination, it is a world-wide creative problem solving program. Teams of no less than two and no more than seven people must solve a challenging problem by working together. This year, our team was comprised of seven sixth graders: six were from MLK Jr. MS and one was from College Park Academy. The team chose the technical challenge, titled "Pace of Change," which required them to design and build a vehicle that used two different forms of movement and two different forms of propulsion and would be able to traverse a distance of 14'1". In addition to this engineering feat, the team had to write a play, create costumes, design scenery, execute at or under a specified budget, and present the solution via an eight-minute performance that integrated the use of the vehicle all in front of a team of appraisers who judged all aspects of their solution. By the way, did I mention each challenge has to include two team choice elements? The team chose their "monster transformation machine" as one element and an original song and dance for their second. Creating a solution involved a lot of research on their part. The team manager is really just a facilitator and has to work extra hard to make sure that they don't interfere with the team's solution...the solution has to come from the team. Early brainstorming had the team coming up with different types of movement and propulsion and then had them going home to research how to create the different propulsion/movement systems and integrate the two solutions together in order to get one functional vehicle. They managed to engineer an electric motor powered cart that can quickly and reliably transform into a working hovercraft.

In addition to this challenge, referred to as the "central challenge," teams are also tested with an instant challenge. These

By Senator Jim Rosapepe

Join us Tuesday, June 7, in Beltsville

her estranged husband last month in the High Point High School parking lot while she waited to pick up her daughters.

Guide Dog Trainee "Leila" Sees the Lions!

Imagine what it would be like to be blind! At one time, blind persons were almost totally dependent on others to look after them and help them get around. It wasn't until 1829 that Frenchman Louis Braille made it possible for the blind to read and write using his system of raised dot characters. In 1930, a Lions Club member watched a blind man try to cross the street with a black cane that was barely visible to motorists. The Peoria (Illinois) Lions Club decided to produce and distribute white canes with a red stripe to make them more visible. This worked so well that Lions Clubs International began a program promoting the use of white canes for people who are blind. The white cane remains a symbol of Lions Clubs' work for the visually impaired.

While white canes made it possible for persons with little or no vision to travel outside their homes more safely, their independence was still limited. Then in 1927, a blind man named Morris Frank went to Switzerland to be trained with a female German shepherd named Buddy. When Mr. Frank returned to America, he and Buddy went on a publicity tour to convince Americans that service animals were helpful and should be allowed in public areas, such as in hotels and on public transportation. The duo was a big hit, and in 1929, Mr. Frank and Buddy's breeder founded an American school to train Seeing Eye dogs.

Today, Seeing Eye dogs are known as guide dogs, and they still go to school! Leila, a canine "trainee," recently visited the Beltsville Lions Club with her foster mom, fellow Lion Lois Barb, to familiarize club members with the service dog training program supported by the Lions Clubs in the United States. Leila came to Lois as a pup. She will train with Lois for 12 months. At the end of that time, she will return to the Leader Dogs campus in Michigan to be assessed. Not every trainee makes the cut to become a Leader Dog. Some dogs just can't resist the urge to chase a squirrel, sniff a passing

TV and your Computer - Part 1

Before we start TV talk, the month of May contains "National Change your Password Day" (apparently May 5th) and "World Change your Password May" (apparently May 7th). These days are supposed to serve as reminders to change your passwords on all of your online accounts. Remember to use a different password for each account and create a set of password rules to create passwords that are difficult to hack. Now back to our regular program.

This is part 1 of a multipart series that covers the integration of computers with television. In the series I plan to cover Internet video streaming devices, TV tuners for the computer or network that allow watching live TV, Personal Video Recording (PVR) software that allows you to use your computer as a Digital Video Recorder (DVR) and Media tools that allow you to store and playback digital media that you have purchased or created.

Internet Media Streaming

Video Streaming has existed on the Internet since the mid 1990's. However much of the technology was proprietary and required additional software to be installed onto your computer. Popular technologies of that time included Quick-time from Apple and the Real player from Real Media. Yahoo and America Online (AOL) were popular outlets for distributing media. AOL offered AolTV which featured many classic television programs and Yahoo streamed a number of popular music videos. While these companies were among the pioneers of the popular technology, as standards have developed other companies have moved in and taken the lead in the space.

Some of the most notable Media Streaming companies today include Amazon, Apple, Google, Hulu, Netflix, and Vudu. These companies stream video to your computer using software that you probably already have installed. Amazon, Apple through iTunes, Google Play, Hulu, and Vudu (owned by Walmart) all offer video rental and sales of movies via streaming. The services these companies offer for the film and TV industry beyond distribution is the management of the rights for people to play the videos without giving the users the ability to copy them. This is known as Digital Rights Management (DRM) and we will discuss this in more detail in a future installment.

- Amazon - offers digital streaming of TV shows and movies available for rent or purchase. A substantial collection of movies and TV shows are available for no-additional cost if you are a Prime member ($99.00 per year or $11.00 per month). A handful of shows are available for free. These are typically first episodes of TV series. Amazon has recently started to create Amazon exclusive TV series for streaming.
- Apple via iTunes - offers TV shows and movies for purchase or rent that play best with your Apple equipment. If you have already bought in to the Apple universe this may be a good choice for you. Media from Apple tends to be less supported on non-Apple devices due to Apple's DRM schemes. iTunes does run on a Windows computer and it is possible to do some media transfers between iTunes and non-Apple devices but iTunes runs best on Apple devices. Apple has recently discontinued Quick-time for Windows, but videos can still be played with Apples iTunes application. It is suggested that people can use VLC to watch iTunes videos.
- Google - Google has two big plays in the Video Streaming world, You Tube and Google Play. Play is the iTunes equivalent for Android devices, allowing movies and TV programs to be rented or purchased and viewed on your computer, Android, or Apple device. You Tube is another beast entirely. You Tube allows everyone to upload videos 6 minutes or shorter. You Tube also provides "channels" of programs which can be viewed online. You Tube allows searching for videos and subscribing to video channels. You Tube videos can be viewed in any modern web browser and do not require any special software. This is also true of videos from the Play store.

- Hulu - Hulu is a video service created ten years ago by a number of distribution partners including AOL, Comcast, and Yahoo. Today Hulu offers subscription content that mostly comes from past and current network TV programs. Some series can be viewed shortly (a few days) after the episode airs on TV. Subscriptions can include or exclude advertisements. Hulu currently requires the Flash Player to be installed or the use of a Hulu application to watch videos.

- Netflix - Netflix offers an online streaming service for movies and television. While they have a large collection of content, the movies tend to be older or less popular with a good collection of Disney material. They have recently signed an agreement to get most of the Disney movies a few months after release. Recently they have also started to create their own new original content. Netflix requires the Microsoft Silverlight plug-in but is rumored to be in the process of moving to an standards based HTML5 video scheme.

- Vudu - Vudu is Walmart's streaming media service. Often videos purchased from Walmart can also be enabled to be viewed on Vudu. Vudu also rents and sells videos directly. Vudu supports the Ultraviolet DRM scheme and any DVD or Blue Ray purchased with an Ultraviolet license can be registered on Vudu. Vudu currently requires the Flash player to be installed to watch videos online.

That's it for part-1. Next month I will discuss devices designed to let you stream Internet media directly to your television. Until then have fun watching.

Memorial Day—A Day to Honor Our Heroes

By Ivy Christoffers

We will miss them, but we will never forget them. On Memorial Day, and throughout the year, we remember those who died while serving in America's Armed Forces. Earlier this year, military members and families honored 12 U.S. Marines who died in a helicopter crash off the coast of Hawaii. In his remarks, Marine Commandant Gen. Robert Neller said, "The men and women in our ranks today, much like generations of Marines before, are absolutely committed to each other, to our corps, our country and our mission. They are courageous, determined and focused on success. These 12 Marines embodied those same qualities and traits." The same rings true for all branches of our armed forces, these dedicated men and women who put their lives on the line for our freedoms each and every day. The closest Veterans Memorial to College Park Post and Unit #217 is at the corner of Route 1 (Baltimore Blvd.) and Greenbelt Road. Here, each year, a moving tribute to our war dead is held. Members of College Park Council, the mayor, the College Park Chorus, other service organizations, and American Legion College Park Post #217 Color Guard and Auxiliary Unit band together to pay tribute to our departed war dead whose lives were given in the quest for continued freedom. We are eternally grateful for their supreme sacrifice. Wear a poppy in remembrance.

This month, we will be participating in the Special Olympics Torch Run as we do each year. It is so inspiring to see these first defenders running up Baltimore Blvd. with the torch that will light up the stadium at Towson University during the Special Olympic Games. We are honored to host them for a much-needed break and provide them with lunch, the necessary calories to carry them on their way. Our members are very generous with their time and talents in setting this up.

Next will come Flag Day. We are accepting American flags that are no longer usable. These can be left in the large mailbox in front of the post home to be disposed of with honors. We are pleased to do this each year for our community. If anyone needs an American flag retirement and dedication of a new American flag, we are happy to render this service. Call Ivy C. at 240.421.9580.

We have just completed our end-of-the-year reports, and it was amazing how much Unit #217 has accomplished during the past 10 months. It is important that we report on all our activities because this record is compiled, along with all the units in Maryland, sent to our national organization, and reported to Congress. By doing so, we remain a tax-exempt organization whose mission is to support active military, their families, our veterans, our youth, and our communities. The American Legion Family remains one of the largest service organizations in the world. When we visit Congress each year, members listen to our concerns and act upon them.

On Saturday, June 4, we will be honoring our Southern Maryland district leaders at a reception held at the Southern Maryland Youth Camp in Cheltenham. District President Brenda Miller has had a great year. She has been tireless in her service and will be a hard act to follow. I think she said she was going into "the witness program" when her year is ended when asked what her plans were for the future.

We ask that you remember the special events always happening at Post and Unit #217, the big bingo games, held every Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday; the Friday night dinner dances; the great lunches served Tuesday through Friday (we are closed on Monday), and the special entertainers in our lounge each month. You will find us very welcoming. This is the place to hold your special event. Call our club manager, Gary Kingery, at 301.441.2783 to inquire about availability or come by and check us out.

Keep our troops in your prayers as they serve throughout the world defending the fight for freedom. May God continue to bless America, the land of the free because of the brave.

Duckworth School Holds Challenge Day

The James E. Duckworth Regional Center held their annual Challenge Day on May 20, where students compete in a variety of sports activities.

The parade of student athletes was accompanied by music provided by the Buck Lodge Middle School Band, and was met with cheers and applause by the many attendees in the school auditorium. The parade was led by Marianne Mapes and Sara Mullins.

The opening ceremonies included presentation of the colors by 5 officers of the Prince George's Police Department. The pledge of allegiance was led by student Diego Alberto Erazo, and a rousing rendition of the national anthem was sung by Joyce Cooper-Brooks.

Three peer coaches commented on their motivation to provide volunteer help at the school. Kenverlin Galdamez, a Principal Lisa Wenzel, Duckworth Regional School, recipient of the Charles E. Castle, Jr. Volunteer Award

Beltsville Adventist School, and Maria Cardona, a student at John Nevins Andrews School. Each gave an inspiring message.

Recipient of the prestigious Charles E. Castle Volunteer Award was school principal, Lisa Wenzel. Principal Wenzel started as a volunteer at the school at the age of 16, and has over the years given outstanding service. It is an amazing story of devotion and determination that led her to become Principal of the school.

The Olympic torch lighting was done by a relay of students, Christine Santana Busse, Chloe Perry, Jacob Wynn and Javier Brown.

Then the games were declared open, and the students and peer coaches went to their respective venues to begin the competitions where all the students had a great time.

Roxanne Reynolds working with the parents of Beltsville Academy.

Beltsville Academy Reaches Out To Their Community

By Roxana Reynolds, Parent Engagement Assistant, Beltsville Academy

This is my second year at Beltsville Academy working with parents and the school staff on how to communicate and work effectively with each other as equal partners. I train and advise parents on how to address their concerns to the staff at school meetings. I also provide referrals to community-based services for families.

As additional support for parents, I hold a monthly Informative Coffee Chat, where I feature different speakers and various topics to keep parents informed and provide them with helpful tools and resources.

Thursday, May 26, 2016 will be the last Informative Coffee Chat of this school year. I will be providing a very important training for Parents on SchoolMax Parents Portal, and Lunch Application in preparation for the 2016-2017 school year. Since this is one of the most important pieces of information for parents, for this event only, I will have two sessions: one in the morning at 8:30 am and a second one in the evening at 6:00 pm. We will meet in the Beltsville Academy Computer Lab.

On Saturday, June 11, we will have our First Beltsville Academy Heath Fair. I am hoping it will be a success with the participation of all visiting organizations, students, parents, school staff and the rest of the community. There will be plenty of free health information and screenings and tests. In conjunction with the Health Fair is also the The Mushala Memorial 5k and 1 Mile Run an annual fundraising event at our School. Details, flyers and more information for all of these events can be found on our Beltsville Academy website, or e-mail me at pea.healthfairbeltsville@gmail.com.

Beltsville Academy 5K and 1 Mile Run and Health Fair

Beltsville Academy presents

The Mushala Memorial 5k and 1 Mile Run and Health Fair on June 11 beginning at 8 am. There will be several free health screenings available from 8-10 am. The start and finish line is Beltsville Academy, 4300 Wicomico Ave. The registration fee for the 5K is $25 and for the 1 mile is $20. You can register online at <http://tinyurl.com/je8jum5> or at the school office during school hours. You may also register the day of the race in the school cafeteria. Proceeds benefit athletics at Beltsville Academy and the Erika White Mushala Legacy Trust Fund. Not to worry, though: even though a trainee occasionally “washes out” of the Leader Dog program, he or she may be selected to be another type of service dog or adopted by a loving family. Most of the dogs do become Leader Dogs and improve someone's quality of life immeasurably. Wherever they end up, they will have a wonderful “forever home.”

IMAGINATION

instant challenges may be task based, where they usually have to build or engineer something; performance based, where they are given a problem or situation and have to develop and often improvise a skit; or a combination of the two. We can't tell you what this year's challenges were; that information can't be shared until after Global Finals. However, we can tell you that they have practiced many different types to prepare. There are material packets with a variety of sample instant challenges for the team managers to use in preparing the team. Some of the recent ones the team worked on involved making washcloth creatures, naming them, and integrating the creatures into a performance; building a structure out of cards, mailing labels, rubber bands, and paperclips, and making sure their structure could support weights; and creating a “bridge” that would support a fixed number of weights and then break when they tried to add any additional weights. The practice challenges that we have worked on tend to run about 6 to 8 minutes. The only thing the instant challenges have in common is that the team will not have seen them before. This instant challenge accounts for 25% of their total score, so it can make a big difference whether a team wins or loses.

The team really learned a lot this year, even how to stretch and prepare canvas (for their scenery). But most importantly, they learned that when you try something and it fails...that it is merely a setback that requires further thought and can often lead to an even better solution.

Baker Bill

The year is half over, and I am sick to death with all the political ads, and there are more to come. I love summer; I have written this often in the past, I know. But here in Riderwood I go outside often around the two lakes. There was a fishing tournament on May 14. I did not know soon enough to get it in the May article, but I hope you and the kids went; it's always a great day of fun for all.

I did not write a recipe this month because I found people do not like to bake in the summer. I have asked your opinion on the recipes in the past, but I've only gotten a few e-mails lately. Come on now—I like fan mail, good and not so good. In the past, if I stopped giving recipes, I would get complaints. People say they like them. The group I meet with in the mornings ask me questions about foods and I answer them, and then they Google them and find out I'm mostly right. When I am wrong, we have a good laugh. I enjoy the questions frankly because I know everything about food—well, mostly. If you have questions, write me at bill@bakerbill.net.

On a consumer note, homeowners be aware of a product called Roundup. The ad says it kills weeds, and, yes, it does, but it should be used only on weeds growing between the cracks in the sidewalk. If you use it in any way on the lawn, you will kill the grass and harm the ground under it. The only way to make the ground grow grass again is to resod it. Roundup also can't be used to edge the lawn because the mist that comes off the spray blows in the breeze and will kill up to 2 feet of the lawn, which is a lot to resod. But it is good for what it is made for.

I wrote earlier no recipe but changed my mind. I came across a great muffin recipe. Measure the ingredients in this order.

3/4 cup sugar
1 cup flour (any)
2 eggs
2 teaspoons baking powder
A pinch of salt
Mix in 1/4 cup milk
Mix at high speed. Needs to be well mixed. (You're mixing air into it.)
Now, stir in slowly 1/4 cup oil (any)

This is basic muffin mix. Add berries, etc. I personally like to add almond flavor and poppy seeds, but you can add anything you like or just bake as is. Fill the muffin pan full and bake @ 360 degrees for approximately 20 minutes. This mixture makes 6 muffins.

In closing, here is the thought of the month: "The persons who believe greatly in luck found the harder they worked the more of it they had."

Have a great month,
Baker Bill AKA Bill Raulin

HISTORY

Maryland did not secede from the union, but many citizens joined Confederate military forces. Two who did this were brothers James and George Emack, who lived in Beltsville in a home on Locust Grove plantation across from St. John's Episcopal Church. James was a 2nd lieutenant in Company F, 7th North Carolina Infantry (CSA) at the battle of Chancellorsville, Virginia, in May 1863. Confederate forces were commanded by Lt. Gen. "Stonewall" Jackson, who on May 2, 1863, was mortally wounded by friendly fire. Earlier that same day, Lieutenant Emack and four of his men were ordered to investigate the report of a Union officer waving a white handkerchief. In the confusion of battle, the officer, Lt. Col. Levi Smith of the 128th Pennsylvania Regiment, asked passing soldiers what side they were on. Emack and his men came across the officer and 200 members of the 128th Regiment. Emack suggested they drop their weapons and surrender because they were surrounded by Gen. Jackson's forces. The Union soldiers capitulated and were taken prisoner. The next day, Emack was killed in action. He had served six months. He is buried in the family plot at St. John's Episcopal Church.

George Emack rose to the rank of major and was involved in several notable battles including one that involved his hometown, Beltsville. The date was July 12, 1864, about one year after the battle of Gettysburg. In the morning, Union cavalry forces were at the Brown farm, location of Brown's tavern, watering horses. As the soldiers commandeered supplies, the widow Brown saw a large dust cloud and many horsemen riding toward them. They were elements of Company B, 1st Maryland Cavalry (CSA), under the command of George Emack. She alerted the Union commander by calling him upstairs in Brown's tavern to see for himself. He immediately rounded up his troops and retreated across the Paint Branch. One Union cavalryman was wounded and taken to Major Emack's house.

The raid on Beltsville was part of an unsuccessful attempt by forces under the command of Confederate General Jubal Early to attack the capital. In Beltsville, telegraph wires were cut, B&O railroad cars were set afire, and railroad tracks were torn up, presumably to prevent Union reinforcements from embarking from the north. Several hundred federal mules were confiscated. The commander of this part of the strategy was Maryland-born Brigadier General Bradley Johnson. One element of the strategy was to move Confederate forces south to the prisoner of war camp at Point Lookout in St. Mary's County. Johnson's troops were to free and arm Confederate prisoners, many of whom had been captured at Gettysburg. Union intelligence sources learned of this objective. When the compromise became known to Confederate authorities, they abandoned the plan.

The war would last another 10 months, ending with the surrender of Confederate forces at Appomattox Court House, Virginia, on April 9, 1865. President Lincoln was assassinated just 5 days later.

Life in Prince George's County would change drastically. The "Emancipation Proclamation" had been issued on January 1, 1863. The economy would no longer depend on slave labor, and large plantations became things of the past.
